

World Languages and Cultures

- learn how language and culture impose their own structurings of knowledge
- pursue intensive study of unfamiliar cultures, or study a foreign language or foreign literature in translation

Only certain courses satisfy a distribution requirement. To meet the requirement, a course must provide in-class instruction and practice in at least two general education capabilities, aiming at mid-level competence appropriate to the discipline. A department offering the course must present an acceptable proposal to the distribution subcommittee of the Faculty Council General Education Committee before the course can be given a specific distribution status. See more information in the For Faculty section.
