				Spring 2025 CRHSGG Courses V3

CONRES 690: Court Mediation Internship

This is a 6-credit course which involves both a regular class meeting and spending a half-day per week in court for four months. In court, students mediate actual cases under the direction of a supervisor/coach. Students are placed in courts in Quincy or Dorchester that are accessible by public transportation. There is also a required two-day pre-court training workshop in January. Completion of the course fulfills requirements of the Guidelines for Implementation of Qualification Standards for Neutrals in Massachusetts. If interested, contact Kelly Ward Mason at Kelly.Ward@umb.edu.

CONRES 625-01 #10664, Conflict Resolution Systems for Organizations, Instructor: Eben Weitzman, Mondays 5:30-8:15p.m.

This course examines different systems for managing conflict. The system may exist in a large corporation, or between two or among many nations, between labor and management, or within a family. The system may be explicit and clear, informal and invisible, or both. The system may be effective or not. The course explores different kinds of conflict management systems and criteria for measuring their effectiveness; and discusses the analysis and design of dispute managing systems.

CONRES 626-01 #10665, Issues in Conflict Resolution Practice: Public Collaboration, Instructor: Madhawa Palihapitiya Gamage, Online/Asynchronous

Actors in local, state, and federal governments must find ways to work collaboratively, manage conflicts, and build consensus on ways to address complex social programs with other public actors as well as with private and nonprofit organizations, citizen groups, and other stakeholders. This is often a challenging task, particularly when dealing with high conflict, competition, and distrust between stakeholders, and when practiced poorly can impede rather than promote effective action. On the other hand, collaboration can be vital to creating and implementing sustainable, successful policies.

CONRES 621-01 #9245, Negotiation, Instructor: Mehr Latif, Online/Asynchronous

Negotiation is the bedrock skill in this field. The course addresses the development of negotiation techniques and fosters student knowledge of the substantial body of negotiation theory that is now available.

GGHS 897-01#10666/CONRES 697-01 #13667, Special Topics: Environmental Conflict, Instructor: Stacy VanDeveer, Thursdays 4-6:45pm

This course explores environmental issues and resources as sources of and contributors to conflict, and as avenues and opportunities for conflict resolution and peace-making. Research and concepts from multiple disciplines, many world regions and many environmental and resource challenges are included.

CONRES 603-01 #8873, Special Topic: Violence and Radicalization, Instructor: Mehr Latif, Wednesdays 5:30-8:15p.m.

The course on violence and radicalization will focus on the causes and consequences of different types of violence, including war, activities of street gangs, hate crimes, and terrorism. It will provide a survey of relevant theory, including the micro, meso, and macro frameworks of violence. The course will apply theories to relevant cases and analyze why states organize violence; the role of violence in group dynamics; and differences in physical, structural, and symbolic forms of violence. We will also look at how social categories, such as race, ethnicity, religion, class, and gender are implicated in violence. Finally, the course will also explore non-violent, evidence-based solutions to mitigate the effects of violence.
